The Global Lens: Coaching “Super-Vision” for an Interconnected World

Are you an experienced coach seeking to explore the challenges and ethical complexities in coaching global leaders and teams?

If so, consider joining the next Global Lens Group, which is designed to generate curiosity, insight and connection using a global systemic lens.

A global lens means viewing coaching and leadership with curiosity about the impact of different perspectives, systems and cultures. Drawing from diverse perspectives, participants will deepen their practice through reflective dialogue, systemic inquiry, and shared learning about specific cases and scenarios. Explore not only what happens in a coaching case, but also how people influence and are influenced by the systems, beliefs and cultures in each scenario.

Coach Supervisors Kathleen Marron (USA) and John Hill (UK) are launching another global coaching supervision group (professional reflective practice) in the fall of 2026.

Both John and Kathleen are accredited Coach Supervisors (through Coaching Supervision Academy), master executive coaches, and experienced leaders. For more information about a Global Lens Group, click: Global Lens
